

INTERNATIONAL BRIEFING

Dear reader,

Welcome to the first edition of our International Briefing for 2020!

Coronavirus. Almost everything in the first few months of 2020 has revolved around it. The pandemic has forced us from our workplaces into our homes, together with our children whose schools, kindergartens and childcare centres have closed. The global impact of the coronavirus on society and companies is tremendous. In the economic world, employees have been just as affected as customers, suppliers and investors. Numerous legal fields and many industries have faced with new questions and challenges.

To help you navigate this difficult time, we are bundling answers and information from all fields of law in our Corona Information Centre on our website.

This edition contains a broad array of topics of interest to international business, with contributions from many of our practice groups, ranging from Corporate and M&A Law to IP/IT and Labour Law.

We look at the current German legislative initiatives for tighter controls on investments from non-EU countries, provide updates on the reporting obligations for the German Transparency Register and review the status of Brexit.

Distressed M&A in Germany – the acquisition of companies out of insolvency – offers opportunities, but also risks. A broad range of legal issues and areas must be considered in such transactions (e.g. insolvency, corporate, labour and tax law issues, and in some cases even antitrust law issues). We highlight and explain a few of the more general legal issues.

We also delve into the issue of cybersecurity under German law, provide an overview of what needs to be considered with respect to unions and works councils in Germany and, last but not least, give a detailed overview of the current developments concerning sustainability in times of coronavirus.

We hope that you will find the information provided helpful in your daily business.

Stay safe!

Best regards,

Dr Maximilian Emanuel Elspas
Co-head of the Corporate / M&A practice group

Strengthening of Investment Controls in Germany and Europe

Over the last two years, investment control rules were strengthened throughout Europe, or for the first time adopted, and a common framework for the assessment of foreign direct investments created by the European Union. The current health crisis which leads to lower stock values of publicly traded companies and generally weakened company values, stokes fears of foreign companies buying the control of EU companies “on the cheap”.

It is against this background that Germany formally submitted amendments to the national investment control rules to its parliament, that France created a special investment fund and that the EU Commissioner for competition intimated in an interview that EU countries could build up stakes in important companies.

Distressed M&A in Germany

Insolvencies in Germany were at a record low in 2019 and insolvency administrators were feeling underworked. And along came a virus that changed economic reality in a heartbeat. Whilst the German legislative has done its utmost to mitigate the economic consequences, it does not take the magical talent of the future-teller to realize: there will be numerous insolvencies in 2020 and 2021, and with that bargains for investors. Obviously, there are not only opportunities, but also risks in acquiring a company out of bankruptcy. Most, often all, risks can be eliminated by a careful examination in the run-up to the acquisition (due diligence) as well as by a careful drafting of the contract. The range of legal issues to be considered touches on a number of legal areas. In the foreground are insolvency, corporate, labour and tax law issues, in individual cases also antitrust law issues. We will highlight a few of the more general legal issues.

Brexit – Nine months to go and uncertainties galore

The United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland (UK) left the European Union at the end of January 2020, but will still be treated as an EU Member State until the end of this year 2020. The EU and the UK have each put forward a draft for the future relationship and each has publicly advocated different visions for the future “EU-UK partnership”.

The combative stance of some protagonists is certainly not conducive to finding an agreement on post-divorce relations. The UK Government under Boris Johnson has hardened or even reversed the UK position in a way that leaves the EU perplexed, fearing that economic rationality is being sacrificed on the altar of Brexit idolatry. The EU's insistence on a level playing field and effective judicial control does not make the negotiations easier for the UK.

First-time obligation of transparency for foreign companies when acquiring real estate in Germany

On 12 December 2019, the German Bundestag (Federal Parliament) passed the amendment to the German Money Laundering Act which serves to implement Directive (EU) 2018/843 of the European Parliament and Council of 20 May 2018 designed to prevent the use of the financial system for the purpose of money laundering and terrorist financing.

The main amendments relate to the extended public access to the German Transparency Register and the extension of the circle of those obliged to notify the German Transparency Register. As a result of the new regulation, foreign companies will for the first time be required to provide information on their ownership structure when they undertake to acquire real estate in Germany. The registration of the beneficial owner of the foreign company in the German Transparency Register is a mandatory requirement for a notarial recording of the asset purchase Agreement.

Update on the German Transparency Register: Reporting obligation for GmbH & Co. KG's due to the change in practice of the German Federal Office of Administration

Since October 2017, German law requires the so-called "beneficial owner" of a GmbH or partnership to be entered in the Transparency Register. The beneficial owner under the German Money Laundering Act is any natural person who directly or indirectly controls more than 25% of the capital shares or voting rights in a Company.

For GmbH & Co. KGs (German limited partnerships with a limited liability company as general partner), as well as for UG (German Entrepreneurial Company) & Co. KGs, it has not been assumed to date that there is an obligation to report to the Transparency Register as the information provided in respect of the limited partners, most of whom are beneficial owners, has presumably been derived from the commercial Register.

Now, however, the practice of the German Federal Office of Administration ("BVA") which monitors the fulfilment of obligations in connection with the Transparency Register and punishes non-compliance with fines has changed significantly.

Some of these regulate cybersecurity in relation to particular types of data, some regulate cybersecurity in particular industries or sectors, and some regulate cybersecurity in companies as part of broader compliance requirements.

Doing Business in Germany – Unions and Works Councils in Germany – an overview

Almost every time foreign companies are advised in the context of their market entry in Germany, the questions are asked: What is the relationship between trade unions and works councils? What are the responsibilities of trade unions and works councils? Must collective agreements be adopted? How can the election of a works council be prevented?
